[The following list embraces the best varieties for summer and fall sowing. For a complete list of Buist's Garden Seeds, see our Garden Guide, a copy of which will be mailed on application]

Buist's Prize Stock
Turnip Seeds

For a general crop, broadcast the strap-leaved varieties in late summer or early autumn, and sow the large round varieties in drills or broadcast.

If you have never grown Buist's Mammoth Purple Top Globe, try it; it can be sown either broadcast or in drills. Ruta Baga, or Swede, should be sown in July or early in August, and always in drills 20 inches apart, and then the plants thinned out to stand 6 inches apart. As the plants grow, ridge up to them, otherwise they will form no bulbs.

Sow 1 ounce to 150 feet of drill; 1½ lbs. to acre in drills, or 2½ lbs. broadcast; salad varieties, 3 lbs. to acre.

LETTUCE

Lettuce can be successfully raised during the Summer months in the South with a little extra work if the following plan is followed: Before sowing, soak the seed for an hour in water, then place in a piece of cloth and put in a cold place. Keep the cloth moist and when the seed is well germinated, sow broadcast, and transplant when the proper size. It is best to transplant in the evening and water well.

Hardy Perennial FLOWER SEEDS

The favorites of the old-fashioned gardens are again becoming popular and deservedly so, for no feature of the garden can give more pleasure than a well-arranged Hardy bed, producing from early spring until November a continuous succession of beautiful flowers. Once planted, they last many years and increase in beauty every season.

Sow outdoors any time from June to August—the earlier, the better—for the plants will then become well established before winter. In the southern states Perennial Flower Seeds can be sown as late as September.

Sow the seed carefully in rows or broadcast and cover very lightly with sifted soil. Water gently but thoroughly and do not allow the soil to become dry during the process of germination. The seed bed should be in a warm sheltered spot, shaded from the direct rays of the sun, and watered until the plants have made four to five leaves. If seedlings come up too thick, they should be thinned out, and when the plants are five to six inches high, they will be ready for setting out in their permanent places. Most of the hardy flowers germinate in eight to fourteen days, while others take a month or more to come up, so do not become impatient.

It is far cheaper to raise your own Perennials from seed than to purchase plants.

Campanula (Bellflower)

Dainty bell-shaped flowers thriving best on light, rich soil. All are hardy perennials.

BUIST'S PRIZE SWEET PEAS

Splendid results can be obtained in the Southern States by sowing in the fall or early winter. The plants become better established and the root-growth stronger, which carries the plant through a dry season better and prolongs the blooming period.

The sowing of Sweet Peas in the North is growing in popularity; they may be planted outdoors in late November or December before the ground is frozen, so that germination may take place in the Spring before the ground is in condition to work. A perfectly drained soil should be selected. Dig a trench six inches deep, in this sow the seed and cover two inches, and, by degrees, as the vines grow up, fill the trench with soil, and thin to about two or three inches apart. Sweet Peas should not be grown in same soil year after year.
